JCEHP: Call for a Special Issue

Topic: Patient Involvement in the Continuing Professional Development of Health Professionals

Background and Rationale
In keeping with the aim of JCEHP, this Special Issue aims to support CPD activities that improve the exchange of knowledge between health scientists, professionals, researchers, educators, and patients across the health professions. By CPD, we mean scholarship and practice that is inclusive of continuing education, faculty development, implementation science, patient safety, and quality improvement across all of the health professions. This Special Issue will focus intentionally on patients, inviting contributions that focus on the past, present, and future possibilities of patient involvement in the field of CPD. Here, we take a broad understanding of patient involvement to be inclusive of the many ways health professionals might learn with, from, and about patients as part of their continuing professional development. We encourage submissions that help to develop the CPD imagination [1], by considering how patients are implicated, represented, and/or actively involved in the history, structure, and culture of CPD practices.

All submission types are welcome:
- original research (up to 4500 words)
- methodology (up to 2000 words)
- reviews (up to 4500 words)
- short reports (up to 1500 words)
- innovations (up to 3000 words), forums (up to 3000 words)
- foundations (up to 3000 words)

All articles received will undergo a peer review process in accordance with the journal’s policies. Please refer to our information for authors page for formatting instructions: https://journals.lww.com/jcehp/_layouts/15/1033/oaks.journals/informationforauthors.aspx
