Check out the article tools!

The screenshot shows the article page for "The Importance of Information: Prenatal Education Surrounding Birth-Related Pelvic Floor Trauma Mitigates Symptom-Related Distress" by Johnson, Kimberley T. MS; Williams, Paula G. PhD; Hill, Audra J. MD. The page includes a navigation menu at the top, a sidebar with options like Outline, Images, Download, Cite, Share, Favorites, and Permissions, and a main content area with an abstract. A red arrow points to the "Download" button in the sidebar. The abstract text reads: "Background: Birth-related pelvic floor trauma and its sequelae (PFTS) are associated with higher rates of perinatal mood and anxiety disorders in the fourth trimester. The fourth trimester is a critical window for long-term health outcomes, and identifying factors that buffer the impact of PFTS is an important research priority." The page also features "Article Level Metrics" (199 tweets, 1 Facebook page, 1 news outlet, 3 Mendeley readers) and "Article Keywords" (childbirth injury, mental health, pelvic floor disorders, pelvic organ prolapse, perinatal health).
